

AGED FARMER KILLED BY BULL

Luray Man Fights Enraged
Animal with Pitchfork
In Pasture.

Luray, Va., July 9.—After a terrible fight with a vicious bull, during which he defended himself valiantly with a pitchfork, J. Calvin Edwards, 74 years old, one of the wealthiest farmers in this section of Virginia, died today at his home three miles north of Luray, from results of the goring he received.

The aged man was afraid of the enraged animal while tending his cattle pasture. There was no possibility of escaping the animal's onslaughts. Mr. Edwards was knocked down four times during the battle but each time succeeded in regaining his feet.

He was the owner of one of the finest farms in the county. For the past seven years he has lived alone. For many years he has been a Democratic official at elections.

Historic Log Cabin Causes Controversy

Cumberland, Md., July 9.—Members of the Civic Club have filed objection with the county commissioners to granting space on Court House square, between Allegany County Academy and the principal residence as the site for the log cabin used by Gen. Braddock as headquarters in the French and Indian war and Gen. Washington as headquarters during the whisky rebellion.

The material for the cabin is being hauled to the site from a farm on the Bedford road, where, according to James W. Thomas, local historian, it was removed some years ago. The building is not ornate and it is contended it will spoil the appearance of Court House Square.

ASKS CLEAN-UP OF BACK YARDS

Health Officer Says Disease
Is Liable to Result
From Neglect.

"Clean up your back yards" is the advice of the District health department, applicable to Washington during the summer months.

Dr. William C. Fowler, District health officer, said yesterday that practically the only drawback which keeps Washington from being a model sanitary city is the condition of hundreds of back yards.

Garbage cans left partially or wholly open are the favorite breeding places of flies and vermin which carry germs into the house, he says.

According to health officials, an appearance of bubonic plague in the Southern States was due partly to householders allowing unsanitary conditions to exist in back yards, thereby breeding rats which carry the plague germs.

Finds Abundance Of Punch and Pep In Milk Shakes

Hagerstown, Md., July 9.—When in Hagerstown, Md., stop in the nearest drug store and order a milk shake.

You may be disappointed, but then again—Dawson Horine, umpire in the Blue Ridge Baseball League, was imbibing a supposedly innocent concoction of milk and syrup in a local drug store the other day.

Suddenly he twined his legs around the legs of the stool on which he was sitting and toppled over, falling into a plate glass show case.

He smashed the case and received bad cuts about the arms. Horine says the milk shake had a kick in it and asked the druggist for an explanation.
